Michigan DEMENTIA RESOURCE GUIDE for Families
You can find a lot of information about dementia on the Internet, and many helpful resources exist for individuals and families - often in your own community.

However, it can be tough to know where to start. That’s why AARP Michigan developed this simple guide to help you and your family navigate the dementia care journey.

We hope this guide will assist you in the following ways:

• Help you locate the type of assistance you need.
  This directory lists pertinent government and nonprofit resources, which you can access both in-person and online.

• Help you connect with others. You’ll discover that you’re part of a vast community of individuals and families facing many of the same issues. You are not alone.

• Empower you and give you hope. It is possible to live well with dementia. Early detection and diagnosis can make a positive difference in terms of planning, treatment options, family relationships and quality of life.
Dementia is a general term describing a loss of cognitive and behavioral function in an adult that is severe enough to interfere with the person’s daily life and activities.

Alzheimer’s is one type of dementia, and it’s the most common one. It accounts for 60 - 80% of the cases diagnosed. The hallmark symptom of Alzheimer’s dementia is memory loss.

Other types of dementia include vascular dementia, dementia with Lewy bodies, frontotemporal dementia, Huntington’s disease, Parkinson’s disease dementia and chronic traumatic encephalopathy (CTE).

Dementia is not a normal part of aging. It is caused by diseases or damage to the brain.

Dementia is not just about memory loss. The specific mental and physical symptoms that someone with dementia may experience depend on the parts of the brain that are damaged and the disease that is causing the dementia.

People with dementia have twice as many hospital stays per year as other older adults. Falls are the leading cause of hospitalization for people living with dementia.

The vast majority of older adults do not have dementia, and most will never develop it. However, as you grow older, the likelihood of developing dementia increases.

Regardless of our age, we can reduce the chance of age-related diseases & optimize our chance of maintaining our cognitive health.

Two-thirds of adults age 18 and over personally know someone who has had Alzheimer’s disease or another type of dementia.
Tips to Find Services and Support

Here are a few pointers to keep in mind as you begin to look for resources and support.

Ask for Help. Friends and family will often ask you if there is anything that they can do to help. Use your network and ask others to help you look for resources and information in your area.

If possible, use the Internet. The Internet is an easy and quick way to get information. Because information can vary, it is important not to rely on one site alone. Also, make sure the sponsoring organization is a reputable and reliable source of information.

Talk to a real person. Many phone numbers will lead to voicemail. It’s important to leave a message, but don’t wait for someone to call you back. Keep in mind that some services have backlogs of calls to return. Keep calling back until you connect with someone who can help you.

Write down your questions in advance. Before you call, write down specific questions and try to be as concrete and detailed as possible.

Keep track of your conversations. Keep a notebook of who you talked to. Write down names, phone numbers, and notes from each call. You never know when you will need the information down the road.

No one person or organization has all the answers. The person you get on the phone or the website you visit may have expertise in certain areas, but not in others. It is always smart to be prepared with other resources and organizations that can help.

Use your creativity. Create your own personal resource network. This could include contacting community-based agencies to find out what kinds of support services are available in your area. Consider asking friends or other caregivers what resources they found to be useful.

Many services are local. Services can vary widely from state to state and community to community. Make sure you look for resources that provide services where you live.

Training and Support for Family Caregivers

Creating Confident Caregivers

Creating Confident Caregivers® is a six-week evidence-based program for family caregivers of persons with dementia who are living at home. Classes are provided by most of Michigan’s Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs) to provide knowledge, skills, and information to improve caregiving for both the caregiver and the person living with dementia. The program is free, but class size is limited and participants must pre-register.

To find a class near you, call your local AAA or visit the Michigan Aging & Adult Services Agency website at michigan.gov/osa. Once on the website, click on “Special Programs” in the left column, and then click below.

THRIVE Network

Connects Michigan families caring for a loved one who has dementia with free or low-cost information and programs from multiple institutions and agencies with a focus on self-care and wellness. THRIVE is a collaboration of Michigan State University (MSU) Extension, Michigan Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center, Wayne State Institute of Gerontology and MSU College of Human Medicine.

THRIVE focuses caregiver wellbeing because how well a caregiver thrives directly impacts how the person in their care will thrive.

Michigan Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs)

The AAAs were established under the Older Americans Act in 1973 as “one-stop shops” to help connect Americans age 60 and over with needed services in their local communities. Michigan’s Area Agencies on Aging work with a network of over 1,200 partner service providers across the state including county commissions on aging, senior centers and home health agencies. There are 16 regional AAAs in Michigan. Your local AAA can help you connect with in-home services and community services such as help with meals, bathing, and household tasks; respite care including adult day programs; evidence-based classes to improve balance and reduce falls; and more.

To find your local AAA, visit the Michigan Aging & Adult Services Agency website at michigan.gov/osa. Once on the website, click on “Aging Services” in the left column, or you can follow this link: https://www.michigan.gov/osa/1,4635,7-234-64081-295815-,00.html

Program of All-Inclusive Care for the Elderly (PACE)

Another way some people can connect with home and community based services in Michigan is through PACE. To qualify a person must be 55 or over, eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid, and live in a part of the state covered by one of Michigan’s 20 PACE centers. PACE participants receive comprehensive health and supportive services across a range of settings at their PACE center, in their home, and in the community.

To find out if PACE is available where you live, visit: pacemichigan.com/find-your-pace

Michigan Long-Term Care Ombudsman Program

Long-term care ombudsmen advocate for residents living in state-licensed nursing homes, homes for the aged and adult foster care facilities. They can provide information about how to find an appropriate facility for your loved one, are trained to resolve problems and can assist you with complaints. There is no cost to residents or families to use ombudsman services.
